

I have been helping people with their insurance needs since 2002. I have met a lot of great people and heard some amazing stories. This year I have had a lot of friends have babies and relatives pass away. It made me start thinking about my health and what would happen if something happened to me. Luckily I have Life Insurance, so my family would be taken care of.

I wanted to share a story of someone I met who wasn't as fortunate.

I went on an appointment a few years ago to meet with a lady in her late 20's. She had 2 young children, under the age of 5. She was shopping for Health Insurance for the family because they were kicked off her husband's group plan. I asked her why she was kicked off the policy, she told me her tragic story.

Her husband was in his late 20's and started shopping for Life Insurance. They both had good jobs and could afford a nice house and vacations in Florida with the kids. He wanted to make sure they were protected in case something happened to him. He found a policy he liked and started filling out the paperwork. He went to discuss it with his wife and she said she was against him getting the Life Insurance policy. She thought it was bad luck, he signs up and then something bad will happen. Not the first time I had heard people think this way. He decided to go with his wife's wishes and not get the policy. Later that year they were vacationing on a friend's boat and the husband was snorkeling. A boat passed by and didn't see him, hit and killed him, he died in his wife's arms.

I met her less than a month after this happened. She barely had time to mourn because she had to go back to work to support her 2 kids. She still was in shock over her husband's sudden death and felt guilty about talking him out of getting Life Insurance. I could not imagine the pain she was in and her story stuck with me.

No one lives forever, you need to protect your family against the unexpected. Even if you are single, someone would have to assume your debt if something happens, don't put that burden on them. Prices on Life Insurance policies have never been better. Even if you have a policy already, we can do a policy review and make sure you have enough coverage or even lower your premium. Remember in this economy people are losing jobs left and right, make sure your Life Insurance isn't tied to a job, make the benefit your own.
